

+1 1

Like 49

Tweet 1

Share

I met Virginie Sommet a while ago at Impossible Project's gallery opening a few months ago. She was wearing jewels on her head and an outfit that I could only describe by saying... well I'd never quite seen anything like it before. I looked at her for a half-second and thought, 'If I saw her on the street, I would definitely ask for a photograph.' But given that the blog is mainly shot outdoors while the sun is out, the setting wasn't ideal. I gave her my card and told her I wanted to take her picture anyway. She got back to me almost three months later.

Virginie Sommet.

13 Jul '12

By: Simbarashe

Filed under Virginie Sommet.

Tagged artist, dress, exclusive, fashion, hair, shoes, soho, women.

Bookmark the permalink.

5 Comments

An avant garde artist, Virginie has had her works in countless shows and installations both in New York and Paris. We shot at her personal art studio in Soho—a space that turned out to be much, much bigger than I'd expected.

This is basically how she dresses all of the time, at least it has been the few times I've seen her in person. When I asked her about her shopping preferences, she replied, "I only buy vintage." Her accessory pieces are all self-made; she specialises in 'computer chip' hand bling.

5 Comments

---

Maryanne

13 Jul '12 at 11:54 am

I love her style. You don't find that very often on the street where I live. It's really cool she got back to you!

---

Johnny

13 Jul '12 at 12:31 pm

The interior shots are crazy good.

---

Breukellen Riesgo

17 Jul '12 at 11:08 am

What an awesome shoot. I love the processing – pulling out the reds.

---

Stills

18 Jul '12 at 4:57 pm

Cute outfit!

<http://www.stills.rs>

---

Iliyana

20 Jul '12 at 2:12 am

she looks amazing!

---

©2012 Lord Ashbury. All rights reserved. Please do not use without permission.

Follow

Follow Lord Ashbury

Get every new post delivered to your Inbox

Join other followers